OBSERVATION TASK 7: Focus on the learners

Teacher observed:	Oleksandr Poddenezhnyi	Level / Age:	Students / 20-25
Length of lesson:	1:25:00	School:	Kyiv Mohyla Academy
		Date:	March 11, 2026

As you watch the lesson, complete the following sentences. Be specific and provide classroom evidence where possible.

The learners really liked... Tasks based on real life experience they were very engaged
The learners found... the work breakdown structure concept easy to apply once real-life examples were introduced, though connecting abstract project management to practical tasks requires some initial effort
The learners learnt... How to break down a large project into smaller manageable tasks
The learners thought... Critically throughout the lesson, as the teacher consistently encouraged deeper thinking by asking questions such as "What other ideas do you have?" "Where else could you implement this?" or "When might this not work?" This created thinking classroom atmosphere where learners were expected to reflect and engage beyond the surface level of material
I really liked... How after every topic was kind of revision of it on practical things and situations from real life which corresponds really well with adult learners for example the topic was Work Breakdown Structure and on the end of it teacher said for example "you have apartment renovation decompose the project because smaller tasks are easier to manage"
I found... Homework really enjoying to choose one process from life and make decomposition of it by drawing block scheme
I learnt... that observing someone else teach is just as valuable as teaching yourself - noticing what works and why made me reflect on what kind of teacher I want to become
I thought... that the lesson was well-structured and the teachers questioning technique was particularly effective - it kept learners actively involved and prevented session to become one-way lecture.
I wondered if... all learners could equally relate to the work based examples used in the lesson. While the class seemed engaged, a younger adult or someone with no professional experience might find it harder to connect with tasks that were provided
